

The Hoosier Dome Archive - Preserving DIY Music History

Background

The Hoosier Dome is an all ages, DIY music venue located in Indianapolis Indiana with a reputation for being a safe, inclusive, and respectful environment for local talent of all ages and genres to perform. Through the years photos taken at the Hoosier Dome have been spread across various social media accounts, as time has passed those photos are in danger of disappearing or becoming inaccessible.

What I did

In order to preserve this valuable local history, my approach was to make these photos publically available in one central location. Using omeka's open sourced content management system I collected these photos, created their meta data, and archived them on the omeka platform.

The Impact

These photos are now gathered together in one searchable, central location, and are no longer in danger of disappearing. By passing these resources on to the community they will be able to continue documenting the legacy of "Dome is Home"
