UW Libraries provides access to the Mirador Image Viewer but most researchers do not know it exists or how to access it.

Every repository functions differently, and comparing images can feel like comparing apples and oranges.

My solution is three short tutorials available on UW Libraries Youtube.

They can be used in individual reference interactions or formal instruction settings

Tutorial 1

Accessing Mirador and Loading and Manipulating Single Images

Tutorial 2

Loading Two or More Images from the UW Libraries Digital Collections

Tutorial 3

Loading Images from Multiple Different Digital Repositories
