information security + learning

problem

there are limited resources for interested individuals to learn and stretch their skills in information security

solution

engineer a website to educate those interested in hacking and security sandbox

professional

you

breadth, then depth

hacking requires a vast amount of knowledge across multiple disciplines as well as expertise in them. we want our community to encompass folks of all levels, whether they are already in the industry, or is just starting off. no matter where they're at, they can find a place.

community

theres much to learn from your peers. we try our best to make it easy to connect with your local information security folks. build your network!

prototype

user
give the users a sense of identity within the community and gamify our user growth scoreboard

competition allows for growth.

challenge
1. professional submits new challenges
2. users solve them
3. user learns
4. repeat

connect
talk to others in chat for immediate help incentivize

professionals can further their network by providing good challenges for the community to solve.

communication

many of our competitors have forum based communication systems. we thought it would be better to have comments that bubble up based on quality.
